This Behavioural Analysis does not provide results that classify people. There are no good-bad categories and the system does not rank people in any way.

All of the information in this report is derived from your "natural behavioural style". It is a behavioural style that takes the least energy and effort, requires the least amount of concentration, and is usually the most comfortable to you. It is the mode that you normally use to react and is most frequently exhibited outwardly in your behaviour.

This Behavioural Analysis divides all of the different behavioural styles into four main styles. These styles are not better or worse. Each of the styles has its own advantages and disadvantages.

- Dominance - D styles are competitive, aggressive decisive and results-oriented, but can also be impatient, overbearing and even rude.
- Influence - I styles are talkative, sociable, optimistic and friendly, but can also be inattentive to detail, overly talkative and emotional.
- Steadiness - S styles are calm, helpful, patient, modest and laid back, but also need stability and security and, therefore, help with change.
- Compliance - C styles are precise, logical, matter of fact, analytical and careful, but can also focus too much on details becoming nitpicking, slow and lose the big picture.

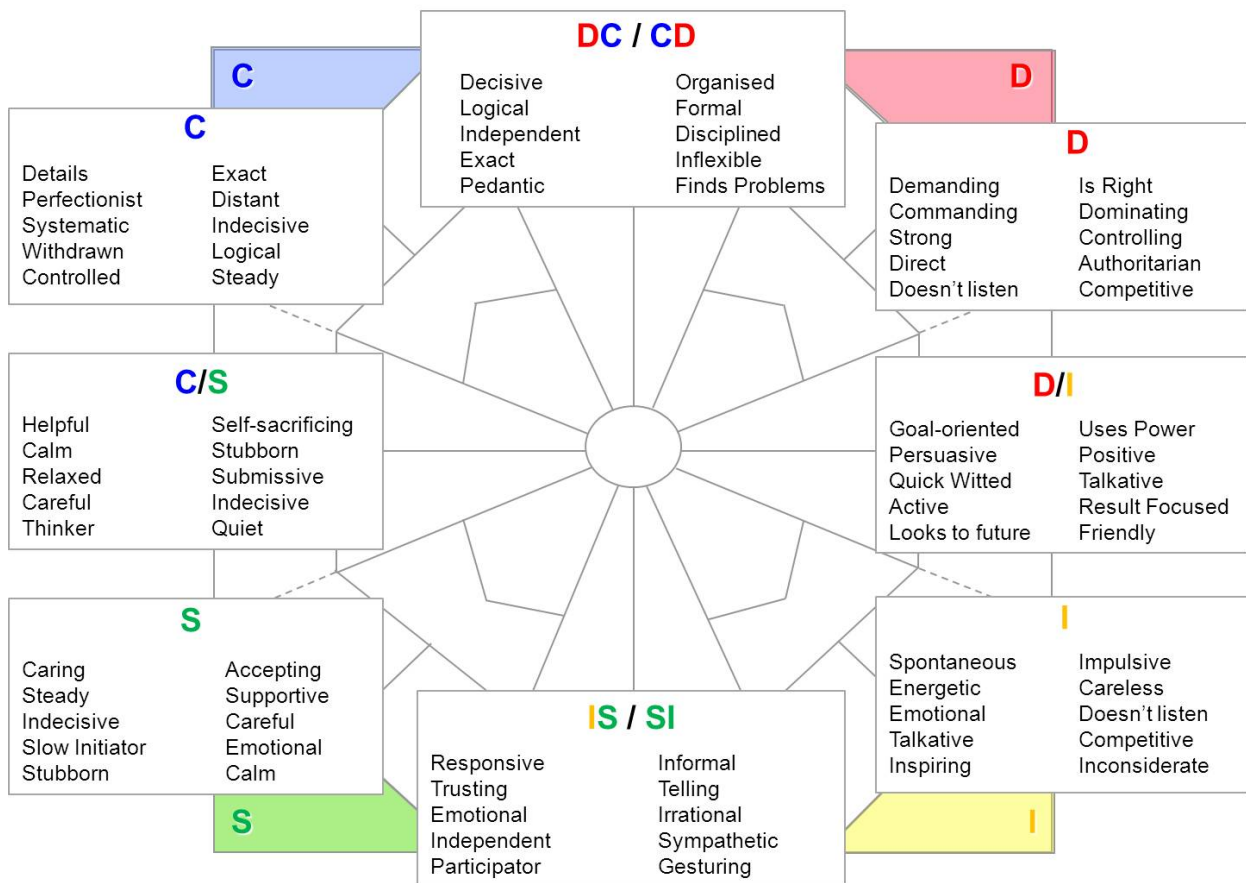

How to identify the Behavioural Styles

Styles and the Extended DISC Diamond

Extended DISC identifies and reports on 160 behavioural styles. The below graphic shows the diamond and adjectives associated with 8 of these behavioural styles.

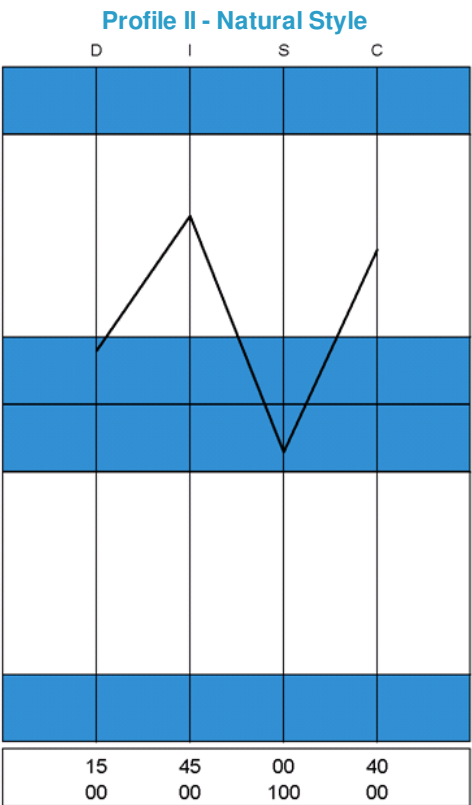

Your Profile

The following profiles are a visual representation of your behavioural style. They are based on your responses to the online questionnaire and have been calculated by your "most" and "least" selections into a frequency distribution of each of the behavioural styles - D, I, S and C.

Profile I - your adjusted style (conscious behaviour) shows how you believe you must adjust to meet the demands of your present environment.

Profile II - your natural style (unconscious behaviour) remains fairly stable, but not rigid, over your lifetime. It is the style that is more comfortable to you and uses the least energy.

There are no good or bad profiles. Just different.

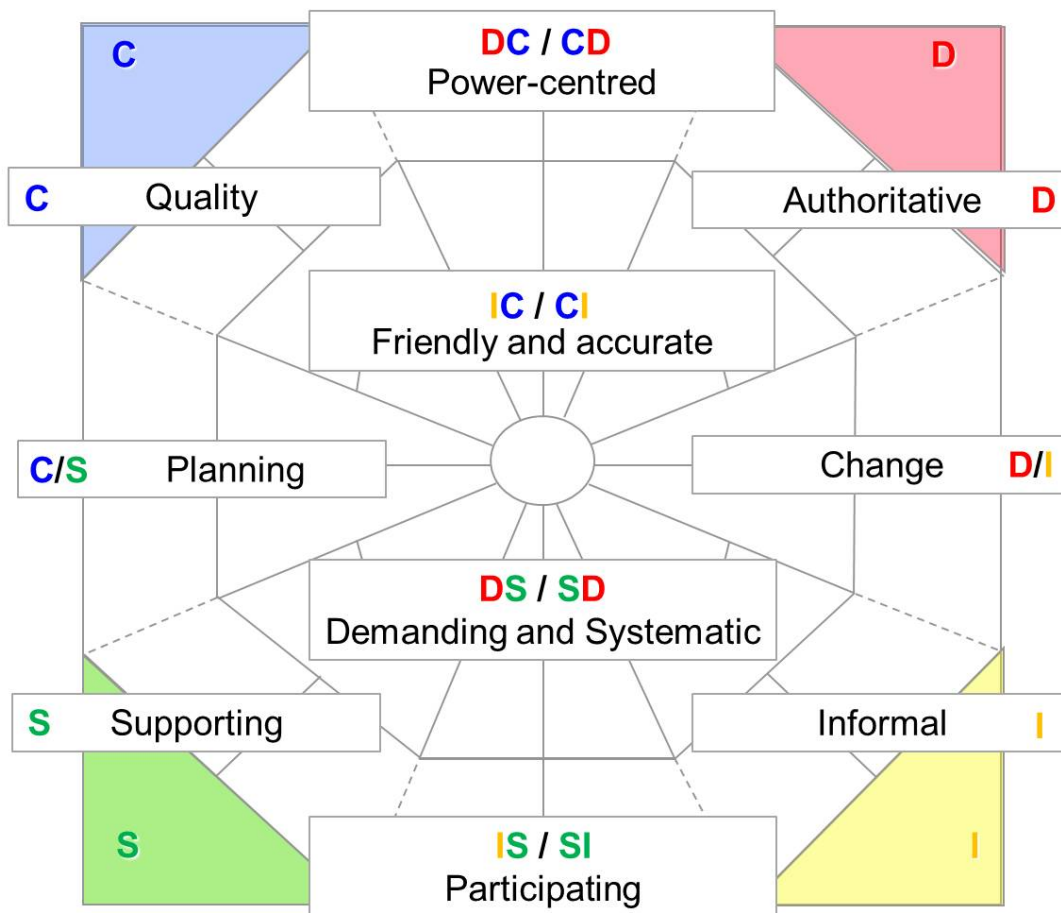

Behavioural Styles

Important Note:

The following graphic is not intended to be specific to the behavioural style and it should be noted, that within each style there are specific tasks that can be just as effectively accomplished by people with other styles.

How flexible is your profile?

The Extended DISC Diamond visually shows what behavioural styles are the most comfortable to you and what styles require the most energy from you.

The deepest shade on the Diamond shows the location of your natural behavioural style. This is your most natural and comfortable behavioural style.

The remaining shadings demonstrate the behavioural styles that are most comfortable and where you can easily develop.

The white areas of the Diamond illustrate the behavioural areas that require the most energy, effort and concentration from you.

The farther you move from your deepest shade, the more energy required.

What motivates you?

You are more likely to respond positively if these motivators are present or increased in your life:

- Good people relations
- Social network
- Varying work responsibilities and environment
- Positive, successful experiences
- Changes
- Moving, freedom and life opening up
- Being part of an organised whole
- Manage without taking risks
- Deliberate decision making
- People-oriented behaviour
- Avoiding mistakes
- Friendly people

What are your strengths?

These strengths come easily and naturally to you and take little energy:

- Can be happy
- Presents one's case diversely
- Gets involved easily
- Is open to new ideas
- Likes analysing
- Brings forward one's own opinion
- Wants to promote things
- Is able to see the details too
- Follows rules but not strictly
- Gets people into a good mood
- Does many things simultaneously
- Keeps up a positive pace

Situations that reduce your motivation:

Your motivation is likely to decrease if these situations are present or increased in your life.

- A need to be too careful
- Being overlooked
- Slow people
- Pressure in making decisions
- Working with pure facts
- Having to be impolite
- Lack of feeling challenged
- Inability to experience or learn new
- Disappearing from people's minds
- Inability to introduce own ideas
- Bored organisation
- End of open communication

When you are under pressure:

These reactions to pressure situations may become more evident when you are under pressure or over enthused.

How you may come across to others?

This page is a description of how you are typically seen by others. While this page describes your typical behaviour, a person can modify their conscious behaviour to suit a particular situation. When reading this page, it will help you to develop an overall picture of yourself.

Note: It is important to understand that the following comments do not take into account "learned behaviour" as you may have addressed many of the issues a person might observe in your behaviour.

Your attributes:

Extroverted, sociable, social, decisive, hard-headed, active, restless, busy, alert, seeks instructions, communicative, open, cheerful.

What motivates you:

Sam is motivated by the chance to work with people in various situations. He likes to inspire others and have people like him. He wants work quite independently, but does not mind if he is given instructions.

What you prefer to avoid:

This type of person tries to avoid smaller working units if Sam does not derive enough motivation from the atmosphere or develop good relations with his clients. In a bigger unit, he has an opportunity to communicate with many different people. Sam tries to avoid repetitive tasks that demand accuracy because he tends to become careless and make mistakes after awhile.

When communicating with others:

He has no problems with going to the people and telling them about something. He likes practical topics but is able to discuss general things as well. He avoids arguing but can take part in reasonable discussions. He has a talent for describing boring and detailed things in a colourful, inspiring way.

When making decisions:

Although he is eager to discuss, he does not like to carry responsibility nor express his opinion about things that cause a negative reaction. He also spends time on large financial decisions that deserve a lot of deliberation.

In a team environment you are:

A communicator is a sociable and genial person who also has an ability to understand the group's rules and regulations. He has an excellent ability to make boring matters interesting. He seeks change but not at the expense of people or the organisation. The group members find him very genial and "easy" but on the other hand a little mysterious and evasive. In reality he wants to avoid aggressions and he doesn't want to guide other people's matters. He is afraid of arguments, which is why he doesn't reveal all of his own feelings to people. He likes the fact that in a group people know what they are expected to do. Meeting different kinds of people in positive matters is pleasant to him. Investigating things and deliberating different points of view as well as creating ideas is pleasant to him, even if he doesn't always want to further those matters forcefully within a group.

- A pleasant way to meet people
- A place to ask for and get information
- A means to ensure a good atmosphere remains

- The one who corrects errors positively
- Presents a familiar matter in a new way
- Is a team player

- Cautiously and willingly gives responsibility to others
- Emphasises the meaning of information
- They want to hear everybody's opinion first

- Wants to avoid errors
- May stay to discuss and think
- Gets bored if the job gets too routine

- Positive energy for pertinent people
- The one who levels down disagreements
- Information for everybody about issues

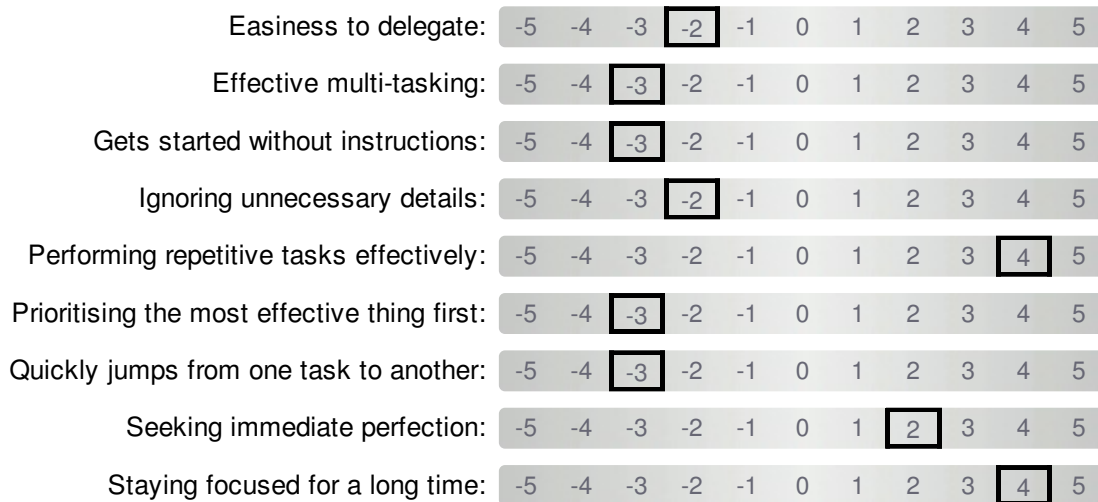

Where does your profile fit?

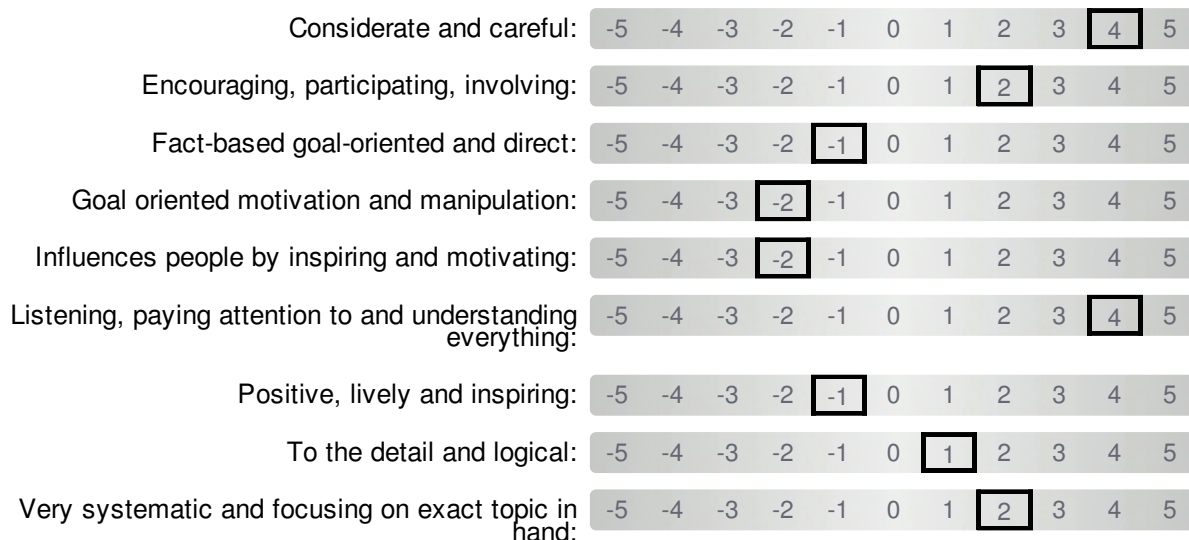

Each slider below shows your flexibility within the competencies of communication, decision making, leadership, time management. Each competency has been graded on a scale from -5 to 0 or 0 to +5. A lower grade (below 0) would mean this competency does not come as easily to you (does not fall within your flexibility zone), opposed to a higher grade (above 0) which suggests it is.

As with the flexibility diamond, this does not mean you are not capable it simply requires more energy. This is not a "can or cannot" scale.
